Such lectures help maintain the international scope Vic-toria requires if her artists and art students are to remain anxious and chal-

The Canada Council with its travel grants to mature artists, is aware of the need for education to continue. Artists must be exposed to a diversity of art if only to reject or push against it. ARTISTS NEEDED

The artist computes the days of the year when the shadow will bisect the state and provides a hint at tower construction; it must have the structual shape of an elliptic modular function. NEVER BUILT

The result, as the artist explains in his presentation, is like two objects hanging down both sides of a hill drooped over a neutral pulley at the summit. The two towers, held in the tension of two opposing gravitational forces, would swing round the earth. INCOMPLETE

WATCHING TV

A photograph of a television set conveys the artist's pre-occupation with outer space. Adhesive lettering has been applied to the TV screen. "This television has witnessed Apollo II. It was turned for the first time at 8:32 a.m., CDT, Wednesday July 16, 1969 and was in continuous opera-tion until 11:50 a.m., Thurs-day July 24, 1969."

From this photo which has foreground popularized by E. Thing Co. of Vancouver, we can be assured that the artist will be watching TV again this Monday when Apollo 14 lifts off. Perhaps the document for this next television session will be more original. Hopefully the artist will invent a means of showing the obvious signifi-cance of the next mission, the fact the artist witnessed it, not the television.

Another photo document shows a stack of computer printout paper 10 feet high. The artist has taken the number 10 to the minus 205,714,079 power and written it out in long form. The first page has at its beginning the decimal point followed by decimal point followed by zeros which run through 25,974 sheets of p a p e r until the final page which has the number 10 at its end. FRANK MOTLEY'S MIXED

By JOHN CUNNINGHAM
TORONTO (CB) — Frank Motley — a musician with an impressive list of talents and accomplishments — is perhaps not as well known as he should be

To keep the regular pay cheques rolling in, Frank often plays obscure road-houses far from the main-stream of the Canadian jazz

And to please the customers often out for as evening of drinking and carousing rather than to hear the music — Frank's quartet has to offer a mixed bag of tricks that don't always provide a showcase for the Negro trumpeter's

But early in the performance, before a tipsy crowd demands a honky-tonk barrage of country and western music and rhythm and blues, the real Frank Motley takes the spotlight.

It's quite a show. Frank plays two trumpets at once.

And he plays them well. Dual Trumpet Bounce — a number Frank wrote himself to lay emphasis on his two trumpet routine—is an unre-lenting arrangement that sounds like the work of a fivemember brass section rather than one man.

TAKES TALENT

He doesn't just blow two horns the same way at the same time. There's marked and interesting harmony and improvisation and the finger work is different on each horn.
"It's like rubbing your stomach and patting your head at the same time — only a lot more difficult.

'You gotta spread your tongue over both horns. It takes a lotta chopps.'' Frank, 47, got the idea of playing two trumpets at once when a circus performer came through his hometown of Cheraw, S.C., the same hometown as noted jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie, blowing a trumpet and burg and programments and burg and programments. blowing a' trumpet and bugle at the same time. "Only he wasn't really playing them.

"Years later when I decided to take up music seriously I began to think about it. I wanted to perfect a technique of really playing two trumpets at once."

Frank, who has played a two-year stint with Lionel Hampton and seven months with Count Basie, decided to, settle in Toronto about 18 years ago.

A sensitive and sometimes morose man, Frank said: "I just got tired of sitting on the back of the bus.

Gastown—Drug Haven?

VANCOUVER (CP) the front door of a beer parlor in Vancouver's water-front Gastown area, a boun-cer was arguing with a middle-aged couple and their 21-year-old married daughter.

The daughter looked as if she could be under 19, the legal drinking age in British Columbia, and the bouncer insisted on proof of her age.

"While we were arguing with him and showing him identification, a man at a nearby table was hollering to us, offering to sell us mari-juana, LSD, any kind of drugs we wanted," the mother reported. "The bouncer had to keep telling him to be quiet so he could hear what we were saying.

OTTAWA (CP) British Columbia government has made a $10,000 grant to the Unitarian Service Committee for the relief of Pakistan refugees, the committee announced Friday.

Most of the money is expected to be used for vehicles to transport food to refugees in camps in the area of Calcutta, India.

A shipment of four tons of drugs donated by Charles E. Frost and Co. Ltd., is also to leave Montreal Monday for distribution to refugees through the committee's partner agency in India, the Rama Krishna Mission.

The Unitarian Service Comhere, is a non-denominational relief and rehabilitation agency that offers aid in the name of Canada. Its appeal for funds to aid Pakistan refugees is to continue until

It has already sent blankets and clothing, 54,000 lbs. of skim milk powder and poly-ethelene film for use in making temporary shelters.

Junior Trudeau Talk Confirmed

OTTAWA — Speculation finally confirmed by the prime minister's office Friday, that there's a new little Trudeau on the way, began as far back as May when Margaret curtailed her attendance on official trips.

When the baby arrives in December, it will be the first child born to a governing prime minister since 1869.

At the most recent appearance of the prime minister's wife, a visit to nearby Perth a week ago, she appeared in glowing good health. At that time, Mounties hovered close by to see she wasn't jostled.

MASS POACH?

VANCOUVER (CP) Mass poaching in restricted fishing areas is being comsidered by west coast seine fishermen in a bid to force federal fisheries people to listen to their problems.ac

Frank Buble, secretary manager of the Fishing Yessel Owners' Association of which represents 450 vessels employing 3,000 per-sons, said in an interview Friday association members fear their season will be ruined by what he described as outdated regulations the department of fisheries is apparently unwilling to modify.

Included are regulations restricting the seiners to tishing in only seven of the 30 fishing areas coastal waters are divided into.

"And now they've cut us down to fishing only two days a week and we're getting pretty desperate." Buble said.

Gastown Off Limits To Youths

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three youths convicted Friday of possessing marijuana were ordered by provincial court judge Les Bewley to stay out of the Gastown area of Vancouver for two years.

He said they will be liable to prison terms if they do not obey terms of the probation order. Albert Gotney, 18, of Calgary was also fined $200 for possessing a marijuana cigarette. John Redfern, 19, and Edward Wood, 19, both of Vancouver, were each fined $100 for possession of marijuana.

Judge Bewley said his order is an effort to keep young offenders out of contact with drug pushers, known to congregate in the Gastown area.

Gotney testified that he was sitting at a table in a Gastown hotel and asked a person sitting opposite for a cigarette. He said he realized it was marijuana after he lit it.

Meanwhile, extra police moved into Gastown Friday night. By midnight, at least eight persons had been picked up on various drug charges ranging from possession of hashish to trafficking in LSD.

A haul of 17½ pounds of hashish from a parked car led to a charge against Grant Ewen Cameron, 31, of Vancouver of possession of hashish for purposes of traffishing Police and poses of trafficking. Police esti-mated value of the drug on the illicit market at $81,000

How Did Your Member Vote?

University political science professor's statistics indicating that, on average, 38 per cent of the members were absent when important votes were taken in the Commons last session.

The statistics, say some spokesmen, do not tell the whole story as indeed they don't. In defence of some absentees, the point is made that among them were members who were ill, members who were engaged in important committee studies, some of them away from Ottawa, some active in caring for the interests of their constituents, often in their home districts. All this is true enough and justifies, in many cases, the absence of the member.

But the situation that has arisen draws informed comment from one of Canada's most competent parliamentarians, Stanley Knowles, New Democratic Party whip and the only member with a 100 per cent attendance record for division votes during the session. Allowing for justifiable absence, he makes the point that the statistics "do tell an over-all story that the MPs are paying less attention to Parliament.

This is mild criticism, but it draws attention to misgivings expressed by many thoughtful students of Parliament who find the new vogue — the Trudeau trend dismaying. Too many important announcements are being made, too many decisions released, away from the Commons chamber in statements by government leaders employing television or other news media to address the public directly. This, as it has been pointed out, frees the person making the announcement of the need to meet venient.

THE PREDICTABLE RE- immediate challenge in the Comsponses have come from Mem- mons in proper debate and contribbers of Parliament to a McMaster utes significantly to the downgrading of Parliament.

> When to this short cut is added the problem of absenteeism on important votes, the institution which is supposed to be supreme in law-making sinks several pegs lower. Not only is it being increasingly ignored by ministers making known decisions on public issues, the differences of opinion that can only be revealed by debate and voting are being dismissed too frequently by the men elected to debate and vote on them.

There is another obvious detriment in the practice of being away when the divisions are called. The elected representative who does not vote leaves his constituents without any record of his stand on different issues. Back home, on the platform, main-streeting, or by television, radio and newspapers, the MP can state his stand. But the hard, cold record is not set down in Hansard. The constituents and other Canadians are left to ponder the difference which occurs between words and action in human affairs.

Members of Parliament, thanks to recent changes in emolument, expense allowances and pensions, have become high-priced employees. As such they have an obligation to reveal their positions to the people who pay their salaries and who, by not absenting themselves from the polls, give them the job in the first place.

Of course there is much more to being a member and performing proper duties than voting on divisions. But absence at such times may increase public cynicism over the apparently growing inclination to pay less attention to Parliament, or the very old trend to play hooky when the occasion seems con-

All this is obvious to anyone who can read a few simple figures but not much has been done about it because it is so obvious and looks so hopeless. We get tired of hearing these things and, like a man conditioned to the noise, the poison and the barbarism of a modern city, we learn to live with the presence of future doom, knowing that if will not touch us. only our posterity. We're all right, Jack. for a little while yet.

In one sense this problem is scientific and economic. How do we use science to arrest the fatal increase of our species and its exhaustion of the planet's

In the case of Canada, how do we repeal the innocent native myth which has governed us from the beginning-the myth of bigness, of population growth, of wealth, efficiency and the reliable gross national product as the panacea and antibiotic for all the ills that flesh is heir to? . How long will it take us to realize that the single magic remedy doesn't work any more, that bigness of itself solves nothing, that our population is quite big enough already, that the crowded world envies us our emptiness and elbowroom?

On the other hand, a Canadian as brilliant as Dr. Solandt warns us that wealth of itself is not necessarily evil and can be good. Dr. John Deutsch, the ablest of our economists and a homespun philosopher as well, says quite rightly that it would be madness to curb the production of wealth when many of our people are poor. So it would.

The trick, then, is to manage the

Were that the only task the answer should be we!! within our capacity. For we have learned to reorganize our institutions and are reorganizing them so fast that today's whatever name you give it, would be unrecognizable to our fathers as it is almost incomprehensible to us.

We can keep on reorganizing it but organized, will not serve all our needs. It never has. You might almost say, indeed, that the better sort of man has survived despite the System, not through Yet to the scientist, the economist the expert of every sort, speaking

Such men are necessary, men like Dr. Solandt and Dr. Deutsch beyond price (especially in their non-professional moments:) But all their reforms, even if they succeed, must touch only the outer fringes of life because it operates under different System entirely, of which science knows little and economics much

Sudden Groping

Hence the most interesting development in our times, it seems to me, is not the discovery of the obvious physical facts, the facts of destruction or survival. It is the sudden, groffing grasping suspicion among ordinary men that many of the ideas on which they have always relied are probably wrong and must be changed.

In the rich nations like Canada, where men have time to think, and freedom to think about life as they please, that dawning awareness of old fallacies and society than all the politicians, scientists and economists combined. It mocks alike the sacred assumptions of politics, the sham battles of politics, the accuracy of statistics. It contains more heresy, hope and explosive force than all revolutionaries of Moscow and Peking put together.

Push to Get Rid of Medicare Premiums months ahead for elimination of medicare premiums in British Columbia

There's no telling whether Premier Bennett will consider giving in to the pressure, despite the fact that his own words will be quoted as the the premiums.

Much of the new pressure will result from federal tax reform legislation which will their employers' share of

*Estimates from Ottawa are that this will cost B.C. taxpayers close to $10 million dollars a year in income tax after Jan. 1, 1972.

It is expected to cost

Alberta taxpayers $12 million and Ontario $58 million. These are the only other provinces with a significant amount of employer-paid premiums.

Bennett will be urged to eliminate or at least drastic-ally reduce the premiums and of medicare costs. The provincial personal income and corporation taxes would be taxpayers $10 million in income tax he will also be passing up his estimated $3 million share of that tax bite.

He may feel that he needs that money to help pay the estimated $6 million to $8 million annual cost of new medicare subsidies that will be paid to low-income persons under the higher federal income tax exemptions.

The provincial government pays 90 per cent of medicare premiums for those with no taxable income and 50 per cent for those with less than $1,000 taxable income.

More Eligible

The number of eligible persons will rise sharply next year when Ottawa raises personal tax exemptions from $1.000 to $1.500 for individuals and from $2.000 to $2.850 for married taxpayers.

But there is serious delay in the current system of providing medicare subsidies to persons who can prove their income was low enough to quality. They require a certified tax return to prove it, which means their 1971 poverty qualifies them for assist

In the meantime, their medicare coverage may have medicare coverage may have lapsed and they may have been hit by heavy medical bills which plunged them further into trouble at their moment of greatest need.

If everybody paid their medicare costs through taxes, their coverage would never lapse and the problem wouldn't exist.

This is what Bennett said about hospital insurance pre-miums in his 1954 budget speech:

"The present plan is replete with contradictions. It is neither a welfare plan nor an surance plan From the welfare point of view it fails to protect adequately the low-income groups, the seasonally employed the unemployed and all their dependants

He went on to say that fixed premiums levied under the hospital insurance scheme were "nothing more or less than a head or a poll tax totally unrelated to actuarial need or economic worth."

He said an insurance plan would always meet with bit-terness "if the benefits it provides are not universally its cost to the people is not fairly distributed in accordance with the ability to pay of the individual.

Of course, Bennett could argue today that the medicare subsidy system over-comes most of his objections to the old system, but the fact remains that there is no complete distribution of the burden on ability to pay

Back to Bennett

A taxpayer with just a few dollars more income than he is allowed ends up paying the full cost of medicare pre-miums, the same as the Signature of a tax levy with an of a tax levy with an of a tax levy with an incidence that reflects in the most equitable manner possi-ble the income currently available to the people."

He said the lax agreement with Ottawa denied the prov-ince the right of taxing personal or corporation incomes.

He then announced "the next best alternative nett has that right to impose extra personal income and corporation taxes to replace medicare premiums.

The decision to continue or abandon medicare premiums will undoubtedly be made on the widest possible economic and political grounds.

The most important factor could be the fear of accelerated costs of medicare in the years ahead when govern-ments will face the unpopular choice of raising premiums or raising taxes.

Raising medicare money through provincial taxes would save substantially on administration costs of collecting premiums. lecting premiums — perhaps more than $1 million a year.

Those who end up paying more — because of their incomes — than they pay now for medicare might not be too enthusiastic about the change, even if they agree in principle with the idea of tax reform to help the poor.

And it would be necessary

And it would be necessary for employees to make sure that the employers' share, of medicare premiums isn't just abandoned, but is included in salary as the actual igcome that the federal government insists it is Absurd? But isn't it just as absurd that while verticle transportation within a building is free we have to pay for horizontal transportation between buildings. It is just as essential.

The reason is, of course, that in our traditional urban bookkeeping, the clevator is considered part of the building, to be paid for by the building's income, while pub-lic transportation of all kinds is considered a separate item that is supposed to make a separate profit.

It rarely does.

As a result, developers along with the rest of us, pay heavily in money, land, pollu-tion and ugliness to coddle the private automobile with expensive roads and park-ing. This, as some thoughtful planners are beginning to dis-cover, is one of the absurdities that frustrate our efforts to build more efficient and

Urban Problems

One of these thoughtful planners is James B. Hodgson Jr., who started as a chemist, medieval historian and electrical engineer, then turned to military hardware systems analysis and has lately applied himself to practical urbanism as the head of an outfit called Ability Devel-opment Services, Inc.

It doesn't much matter just what kind of transportation device is used. It could be a mini-rail, or a "carveyor." or a "sky-bus," or an of the 1f0 different transit systems, that transit systems, that have been developed in recent years by different corporations, some of which are actually available. What matters in a new creative approach to practical city building, is no longer know-how, but to know how to think. We have the technology.

"sophology," more wisdom, Hodgson says.

There is no great technical problem about installing an automatic transportation system that, to meet Hodgson's specifications, has the capacity to move 10,000 people an hour on the 10-minute circuit from the parking garage and/or subway or bus stop through the development. The train would run right stop through the development. The train would run right through the buildings and shopping malls and let the people on and off close to the elevator lobbies, main stores and other attractions along the way. At off-hours it would approach and make of the content carry goods and garbage.

A monorail system is also likely to be built into the proposed Manhattan Battery Park City that has been proposed on a 91-acre Hudson River landfill between New York City's Battery Park and Chambers St. It is to provide housing for 55,000 people and a huge shopping mail and a huge shopping mall that will extend as far as the World Trade Centre's Front

Flashy Senate Report On Poverty Forced Writers to Quit

By BOB HUNTER The Sun

As far back as last October Ian Adams - one of the writers who quit the Senate Committee on Poverty to write a "renegade report" was certain that the official report would turn out to be a fraud.

'We'll probably have to quit," he said. "(Senator David) Croll wants a flashy report so he can make a pitch for a Guaranteed Annual Income, but he won't want to get right down to the nitty-

Adams had offered me a job as co-author of the Senate job as co-admor of the senar report. I turned it down. The job would have paid $2,000 a month, plus weekly travel expenses between Vancouver

Even with that kind of income, I would probably have still been one of the lower-paid people working on the project. If the writers were getting $2,000 a month, and the senators were collecting their $22,000 a year plus expenses, and all those economists and social workers and whatnot were running around whatnot were running around well, the mind boggled at how much was being spent to 'heip' the poor without any of that money actually getting into their grubby little hands.

Adams, a Toronto media mafia person and author of The Poverty Wall, said at the time he felt certain that Senator Croll was going to apply all the pressure he could to water down the findings of his committee. In short, the Senate Report on Poverty would be a cynical political ploy.

* * * In April, like a stage production the script of which I'd already had a peek at, the drama unfolded. Adams quit in protest "because the chair-man of the Senate Committee man of the Senate Committee on Poverty did not want to accept a candid appraisal of our society." Writer Bill Cameron also quit, along with economists Peter Penz and Brian Hill. And in the latest issue of Last Post magazine, they / have published their renegade report on poverty they / have published their renegade report on poverty. It amounts to 30,000 words. The picture it paints of what life in Canada is really like—if you are not one of the favored people—is quite at odds with the kinds of lollipop commercials thrown at us by so many of our politicians so many of our politicians - don't-make-a-wave variety.

The central criticism it makes is that the economy does not serve the needs of the majority of the people of this country. Canada has a higher rate of unemployment than any other advanced industrial nation, despite the fact that the past decade has been one of consistent econ-omic growth — the Gross National Product having risen between 1961 and 1970 from $39.1 billion to $84.4 billion.

The system, according to the authors of this report, is rigged—through and through against the poor and it is doubly-rigged to make sure that the people with lots of money-keen their money.

Families Hurt Least By New Payment Plan

If provincial medicare vosts were paid out of a special income tax rather than by premiums, the cost comparison for individuals would vary greatly along the income

Prosperous single persons would be hit the hardest; families the least on comparison with present medicare

People with half their premisms paid by an employer will find $30 a year for single taxpayers. $60 for married couples and $75 for families will be added to taxable income under federal tax reform proposals.

between $1,000 and $2,000 to 47 per cent of all amounts taxable over $60,000.

The total cost of medicare to taxpayers if the premium system is continued would be their current share of the premium plus the tax on the employers' share.

If the premium system is abandoned the total cost would be the tax paid for that

Let's assume that Premier Bennett decides to raise most of the needed money - about $80 million next year - by raising the provincial income

On that basis, all persons with the same amount of taxable income would pay the same amount of tax for medicare service. This would mean that single persons would subsidize families even more dramatically than they

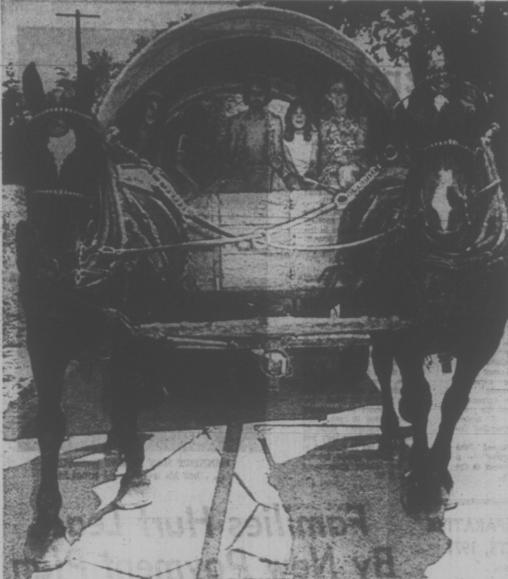

The table shows some selected comparisons of medicare cost. To adapt it for medicare cost. To adapt it for persons paying all of their medicare premiums now, simply substitute the figures $60, $120 and $150 for the premium costs shown for single, married-no children and married-children rates, respectively.

Proposed further federal tax reductions for the years 1973-1976 would further in-crease the benefit to lower

'BLACK SLIMY THING' TOO MUCH FOR GUARDS

BOSTON (UPI)—Three security guards were patrolling a golf course late one night when "this big, black slimy thing" came out of a swamp, one of the guards said.

"Then a second creature emerged. By this time we were getting a bit upset," he said.

When a third "creature" came out of the swamp "we decided to beat a hasty retreat." One of the guards ran for the police, he said, while the other two stambled around the dark. The three creatures meantings were "sort of in the dark. The three creatures, meantime, were "sort of hopping away."

When police showed up they fired a warning shot and the creatures stopped, turned around and waddled back. That was even more frightening.

But they turned out to be three college students in scubs diving outfits, complete with flippers—which is why they "sort of hopped."

They were only diving for misdirected golf balls so they could sell them.

MISS NUDE WORLD

Big Smile Her Only Attire

FREELTON, Ont. (CP) The tears of joy shed by the winner of an international beauty contest here Sunday could run unimpeded right down to the tips of her painted toenails.

That's because a panel of judges will be picking the 1971 Miss Nude World from a bevy of 20 naked ladies, all card-carrying pudists from camps in Ontario, Quebec, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

And as any inveterate affiand as any inveterate attri-cionado of schmaltzy beauty contests knows, the pageant winner always cries while being crowned and invariably has painted toenails.

One of the wrinkles in the Miss Nude World contest is that the contestants wear nothing but a big smile. Consequently the winner has hardly anywhere to tuck a hanky when those tears of joy

WINNIPEG (CP) — In one quick swoop, the Manitoba legislature's municipal affairs committee Thursday approved a major amendment to a bill which has been described by the opposition as a threat to the right of assembly and by youth groups as a move against rock festivals.

The bill as originally consituted would have required that any gathering on private property involving more than 1,000 people have a permit the local municipal council after meeting certain standards of sanitation, police and fire protection.

It would also have required three weeks' notice for an application and would have given a municipal council "absolute discretion" to with-

The difference between and a Buick deal is the car you get for your money.

There's more for you in a Buick deal because there's more for you in a Buick. Here's why.

Compare a Buick Skylark with anybody else's intermediate-size car. You'll discover a lot of Skylark's standard features are extra-cost options on most other-cars. If they offer them at all.

For instance, you'll pay extra for a V8 on most other intermediate-size cars. While on Skylark, a 350 CID V8 is standard. And Skylark's V8 features nickle-plated exhaust valves for longer valve life. Skylark has a semiclosed cooling system that should never overheat. It's a Buick exclusive.

And Skylark gives you 'trued,' tires and wheels for an even smoother Buick ride.

Trading is easy.

Right now, your Buick dealer has a big selection. Chances are you'll find a Skylark equipped just the way you want it. And you'll get a deal that's easy on your budget.

A Buick deal that gives you sumptuous interior trims, and engineering features like flush-and-dry rocker panels that help cut corrosion Order a radio, and the antenna is hidden in the windshield.

So you see, the difference between a new car deal and a Buick deal is the car you get for your money. And honestly now. Wouldn't you really rather have a Buick?

The business of auto safety.

Auto safety is everyone's concern. But it's our business.

And we think the attention that's being paid to auto safety now is a good thing. Because it will-result in better driving

And, frankly, better driving for everyone means better business for us

We say Buick is something to believe in. That's why we're trying to make it easy to be safe by putting in safety fea-tures that work by themselves. You don't have to do anything to make them work Like Side-guard beams. And the energy-absorbing steering column. And the Cargo-guard between the trunk and back seat. They start "working" even before you get in the car. But two safety features, two of the most vital, are worthless unless you do something first. Seat and shoulder belts.

Unfastened they do nothing. And you've seen enough statistics to know what a difference they can make. So use them,

But that's not all you can do. Because the most effective safety feature of all can't be added to our cars or anybody

That feature is you. And the way you drive.
Which should be defensively.

And rested. And sobe We're all in this together

And together the auto safety and for all

Drive a Buick deal...

SHIPS WAIT THEIR TURN IN ENGLISH BAY

Jam in VANCOUVER (CP) - A strike. Harbor officials said record number of cargo ships jammed into Vancouver barbor and a shortage of stevedores have caused a drastic slowdown of freight movement along the waterfront, says port spokesmen.

A total of 67 ships were either unloading or waiting for berthing space as vessels continued to arrive here, re-routed because of a west coast U.S. longshoremen's the previous record of about 65 ships was set in January, 1969, during a grain tieup.

"Cargo is being discharged at a faster rate than it is being picked up," said Ian-Mardoch, west coast director of the Canadian importers association, which represents major port customers.

George Doyle, manager of Centennial Pier, said there was a "gradual tightening" of cargo movement but that goods were still being shipped from the harbor.

Ed Strange, president of the B.C. Maritime Employers Association, said there still were shortages of longshore gangs and that some ships did not have sufficient gangs to handle cargo efficiently.

Mardoch, who is also presi-

In fact, this is the classic confrontation between those who believe in the socialist concept and those who cham-pion the idea that private than he earns accumulates "after-tax" savings which he may wish to spend ultimately or give away either in his lifetime or at his death.

The present law excludes a important form of gains from income taxation—capital gains, and it was because of this exclusion that people have argued that there should be a tax, at some time on one's accumulated capital.

Because Ottawa has decided to levy a fairly stiff capital, gains tax, starting Jan. 1, the federal authorities were persuaded that it would be too harsh a penalty on those who saved their money, rather than spend it during their lifetime, to tax same money twice — once when it was earned, and again when it is given away. This accounts for the abolition of federal gift and estate taxes.

To do otherwise could produce substantial hardship. Suppose a father has a summer cottage which he built himself 10 years ago at a cost of $5,000. He decides to give it to his daughter who give it to his daughter who has children of her own.

At this point the cottage is worth $15,000, partly because of inflation, but mostly be-cause his own labor went into

If he transfers the cottage

It is now clear that no final evaluation of the effect of the tax reform plan can be made until the provincial govern-ments declare themselves on the subject of what further taxes they intend to impose.

It is within their power to make the federal plan work essentially as intended, or to a large extent, thwart it by a large extent, thwart it by imposing new provincial taxes in those areas where Ottawa has either reduced or abandoned existing taxes.

Nowhere is this more obvious than in the gift and estate tax field. Finance Minster Edgar Benson accepted the criticism of his original tax white paper and in the new legislation these federal taxes will disappear. will disappear.

. This move was required in the light of the peculiar characteristics of the new capital gains tax system, which, unlike its United States counterpart, provides that when one makes a gift or leaves property to someone at leaves property to someone at his death, any increase in the property's value over the original cost will be taxed as a capital gain.

To add a gift or estate tax on top of the capital gains tax would have a crippling inpact in most cases. It really becomes a matter of philosophy turning on the question of whether or not one believes a citizen ought to have the right to freely dispose of his to his daughter, he will be "deemed" (i.e. imagined or supposed) to have made a capital gain of $10,000. He will capital gain or $10,000. He will take half the gain into income and pay taxes on it. Assuming he is making $10,000 per year, this added and imaginary gain would be taxed at about 40 per cent. Thus, even though he hasn't precisived any cash.

e hasn't received any cash, e would have to look around nd somehow find $2,000 for the extra tax:

That in itself might be termed ridiculous, but the situation worsens if he lives in one of the provinces which decides to levy a gift tax.

Depending on what other gifts he has made, based on present gift tax rates, the $15,000 value of the cottage would be taxed at 12 per cent. he extra tax.

would be taxed at 12 per cent

this not too far out example, a taxpayer making $10,000 per year would be taxed nearly $4,000 for the privilege of transferring to his daughter a summer cottage which he built himself for $5,000. Obviously he wouldn't be able to afford the luxury.

While this is patently absurd, it becomes even more impossible for the farmer or pass his assets to his children upon his death.

Suppose he starts a business or farm at a cost of $10,000 and at his death 40 years later, it is worth $310,000. Under the federal capital gains tax system, even though his children do not sell the business and have no cash with which to pay the tax, the esatate would have to find about $85,000 immediately just to pay the income tax on the alleged capital

If his province then levies an estate tax on the $310,000 estate, without giving credit for the federal capital gains tax paid (in which the province shares), another tax bite of as much as $70,000 could be felt, depending on what rates of tax the prov-inces impose.

Thus where an individual simply transfers his farm or business to his children at his death, the family would be taxed in excess of 50 per cent of its value, and what is worse, would not have the cash to meet the tax obliga-tions.

cepted the logic of abolition of estate and gift tax but the provinces are non-committal as to their plans. Indeed the government of Manitoba at the last federalprovincial finance ministers' conference gave strong indicaion that it might increase its taxes by levying a provincial gift and estate tax.

The plans of the other provinces are less clear, other than Alberta which has said it, too, will abandon these taxes.

The federal government can and should strongly influence the provinces in this regard (Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer and leader of the Manitoba Liberal party).

MISERLY ROYALS PLAY 'GAME' WITH SPARTANS

'put the ball in the net," and Vancouver Spartans of the League will be out to do that for the first time against Victoria Royals tonight a Royal Athletic Park.

Royal Athletic Park.

Spartans have not had much luck in that category against Royals this year, unless you consider four shutouts in four games lucky.

Royals won three of the games and the other was tied.

But a look at the Royals' But a look at the Royals' defence shows why only three goals have slipped into the Victoria net this season.

Coach Brian Hughes and backs Howie Anderson and Ray Teliord pose a formidable threat to potential goal-scorers, and behind them is either Graham Lee or Barry Sadler, two goaltenders with sterling records.

In fact, there is only one man in the league who has been able to beat the Royals' netminders. That's Edmonton's Rick Hart, who potted one on a penalty shot here and two other goals last weekend in Edmonton.

So Spartans will have to be at their—best to penetrate tonight.

An added attraction for

Senior Champ

MONTREAL (CP) — Henry Mitchell, a bus driver from Vancouver, shot a two-over-par 72 Friday to win the Canadian seniors golf championship at the Kanawaki Golf Club.

Mitchell's score gave him a 222 total for the 54-hole event, two strokes better than defending champion Jack Nash of London, Ont., who finished with a 78 and a 224 total.

Ken Newbury of Vancouver shot a final-round 75 and Merl Noyes of Port Colborne, Ont., fired an 80 to tie for third with 229 totals.

Gord Tsylor of Montreal and Phil Farley of Scarborough, Ont., shared fifth spot with dame if necessary Tuesday at in the last few innings, walked three men in the seventh. Peter Eng then singled, scoring the tying run and Stenseth hit his sacrifice.

Stenseth's performance on the mound was as good as his plate effort. He came on in the sixth to relieve Pat Constable, and, with mone out; struck out the first two men and got the last on a ground ball.

Atter allowing the Esquimalt run in the seventh, Stenseth struck out the side.

Lapping Up the Flavor of Victoria

'Born of the sun they travelled A short while towards the sun, And left the vivid air Signed with their honor'

-Stephen Spend

Photos by Bill Halkett and Irving Strickland To see—or not to see— that is the question.

Like a bud in the first burst of warm sunshine, Victoria explodes during the summer months; its population swollen with a fresh injection of tourists each day.

They come from all parts—in all shapes and sizes.

Through fresh eyes they see the wonders of a city that to us has become as familiar as a well-worn chair —comfortable, but unobtrusive.

To make sure their impressions last they take pictures—of the city, the people, themselves.

They take away with them prolific records of a familiar scene made so by the regularity in which it changes.

They leave conventional dress behind when they come here

Such lectures help maintain the international scope Vic-toria requires if her artists and art students, are to remain anxious and chal-

travel grants to mature artists, is aware of the need for education to continue. Artists must be exposed to a reject or push against it.

ARTISTS NEEDED

Victoria which does not have a wealth of galleries and none with significant inter national connections, needs these artists who come to visit or teach for brief tenures. They are a source of

Perhaps it is good that Uvic has been losing or firing worthwhile artists after a short contract period. With the turnover comes a wider cross-section of arts in other countries. Sia Armajani exhibits a technical illustration and related computations which de-fine an 18-mile-high tower. The purpose of this tower is to cast a shadow across the entire 360-mile length of North Dakota.

The artist computes the days of the year when the shadow will bisect the state construction; it must have the structual shape of an elliptic

NEVER BUILT

The monster will never be built. It will survive as a technical graphic behind glass and as a concept in the

With technology at its present level of sophistication and with faith in technical progress almost a religion, the idea of such a tower, though absurd, is not completely incredulous. It is a logical extension of the style American super civiliza-ment will buy the idea as a make-work project to stabilize an economy flooded with unemployed soldiers, and munitions workers. Such a tower would be a safe focus for activities with for patriotic pride.

Another proposal is way out in space. The artist suggests a tower 48,000 miles high of circular cross section Actually two towers are pro posed, one extending from the surface of this planet up to syncronist orbit where, thanks to the centrifugal force at such an altitude, gravity is neutral; at this point, attached to the first-tower is a second of equal size, extending out another 24,000

The result, as the artist explains in his presentation, is like two objects hanging down both sides of a hill drooped ever a neutral pulley at the summit. The two towers, held in the tension of two opposing gravitational forces, would swing round the earth.

Uvic mathematician. George Hall, looked over this artist's computations and found his mathematics to be general physical principle de-scribed above, other factors tion have been ignored. But then precise physics was not a virtue of Jules Verne either.

The critic suspects this artist's main influence to be the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

A photograph of a television set conveys the artist's preoccupation with outer space.

Adhesive lettering has been applied to the TV screen. This television has witnessed Apollo II. It was turned for the first time at 8:32 a.m., CDT, Wednesday July 16, 1969 and was in continuous opera-tion until 11:50 a.m., Thurs-day July 24, 1969."

From this photo which has foreground popularized by E. Thing Co. of Vancouver, we can be assured that the artist will be watching TV again this Monday when Apollo 14 lifts off. Perhaps the document for this next television session will be more original. Hopefully, the more original. Hopefully the artist will invent a means of showing the obvious signifi-cance of the next mission, the fact the artist witnessed it, not the television.

Another photo document shows a stack of computer printout paper 10 feet high. The artist has taken the number 10 to the minus 205.714.079 power and writtenit out in long form. The first page has at its beginning the decimal point followed by decimal point followed by zeros which run through 25,974 sheets of p a p e r until the final page which has the number 10 at its end. That such an infinitely small fraction requires such Tonderous

Cool wit and mathematical pipe dreams are the content of this exhibition. Artistotle's theory of Art justified creative activity as a purge for the dangerous emotions. Purging an excess of cerebration might also be justification if it did not imply that spends itself elsewhere

HARD WORK

They worked hard and continuously, he says. "Normally around eight hours a day, but when we were preparing new work, maybe 12 or 16 hours every day."

Mime, which is an old as the history of theatre itself, means literally "imitation."

It was not always the purely silent art that it is today but while it has been polished, distilled and refined, so that today's mime performer must convey by gesture and movement, every thought and emotion without need of stoken word, it is still need of stoken word, it is still need of spoken word, it is still a cogent reminder of the theatre's vitality through all the ages of man.

Four of the Afabs are Israeli citizens, a spokesman said. The fifth is a resident of Nahius in the Israeli-occupied west bank of the River Jordan. They were accused of belonging to Al Fatah, the Palestinian Arab guerrilla organization.

The Israelis were wounded when an explosive charge placed in a stolen Jeep went off shortly after midnight the night of June 30, 1969. The vehicle had been parked in the heart of Tel Aviv, not far from Ben-Gurion's apartments.

The Arabs also were accused of planting explosive charges near a movie theatre here two years ago and in the seacoast resort town of Netanya last resort town of Netanya last summer.

The group is believed to have been commanded by Abdul Malik Dahamshah, 26, an Israeli Arab lawyer from Kafr Kanna, near Nazareth in northern Israel, police sources said.

Daycare Regulations 'Idealistic' Extra Cost Passed on to Parents

Provincial daycare regula-tions expect champagne facilities on a beer budget, contends a Victoria daycare trator of Jiminy Crickets Nursery and Kindergarten, said that minimum standards for daycare centres set by the B.C. Community Care Licens-ing Act are "almost idealistic standards."

He said he'd love to see schools meet these standards for the children's sake. But they are forcing the cost of daycare services to a point where fees can only be paid by the wealthy, or be subsi-dized by the government, Pettersen added.

As an example, Petterson cited the regulation that stipulates 25 to 30 square feet of free space per child.

Compliances to this regulation would cost his centre $20,000, he said.

Policewoman Liz Stilwell blows whistle

This Student Policewoman Respected by Colleagues

A whistle—not a pistol—and a friendly smile arm Victoria's only student policewoman.

And, fortunately, that's all that's been needed so far. She steers clear of brawls and fist fights, but she walks a beat—investigating thefts, controlling traffic and handing out warning tickets, just like the rest of the men on the force.

The difference?

About 12 inches in height, a bit more less and a lot

About 12 inches in height, a bit more leg, and a lot more attention.

Liz Stilwell, 22, is a 5-foot, 3-inch, second-year law student at the University of British Columbia and she and three male colleagues are working with the Victoria City Police for the summer.

City Police for the summer.

Miss Stilwell wears a skirted police uniform, admits she's pampered, and feels strongly about woman's position in law enforcement.

"I don't get the disrespect some policemen dopeople are noticeably more respectful." she sighed. "But I'm treated as an oddity."

The men on the force let her handle as many situations as possible, she said.

"But most of them play the big man . . . I know they don't mean anything, but if more women were working with men in the force, reactions would be different."
Miss Stilwell said.

'All the Women are Secretaries'

Although the 121-man force boasts a full-time woman—Janet Holmes, 31-roles are clearly defined

"All the women are secretaries and all the men are constables," Miss Stilwell said. Still, she feels women can play an important part in law enforcement.

"They can afford to do more legal aid and stick their necks out in public because they usually don't depend on their job for a living," Miss Stilwell said. Men can't afford to put their livelihood on the line.

"It seems that all females taking law branch into family law, which doesn't involve as much hard and fast law as in some areas.

"The males all seem to take company law.

"I really don't want to help a big company. They likely make quite a bit of profit anyway. I think I'd rather work in criminal law with legal aid and poverty. I hope I can help mitigate the harshness put on some people."

Despite Heels It's 'Most Enjoyable'

Miss Stilwell graduated a Bachelor of Arts, in history and philosophy from Saskatchewan University.

Her daily routine this summer is considerably different from her campus days.

Now she clicks heels together after receiving her daily duties and either answers complaint calls at the station (often from people wishing to speak to a constable instead of a policewoman) or travels about Victoria on toot or in a police car.

Another difference—Miss Stilwell wears heels for eight hours a day, while the men wear "comfortable"

"Still, it's most enjoyable," she said.

Walking a beat enables her to "get to know indiidual policemen" and businessmen.

"You can be more hopest with one constable than you can be more nonest with one constable than you can with a whole group, "she said.

She doesn't walk any beat after dark, but even in the bright sunlight she's "never had enough nerve to talk to a long hair in Centennial Square."

Occasionally someone comments on the walking duet, she said, referring to a passing shopowner who velled:

"Hey, they're going sleady

Ironically, it was the church that foiled her plan not to let the children Joy, 11; Jill, 1; James, 8, and Jan, 6, know of the deaths of the three cosmonauts — "the minister brought it out in church."

Native Youth Problems Discussed at Conference

back at the Indian ecumenical

Held on a campground 50 miles west of Calgary, repre-sentatives of most major North American tribes are discussing both Christianity and native religions.

Respect for Young

The conference was called because of a growing concern for native youth, said Wilfred Pelletier of Toronto, a steer-

Indians traditionally respected their children as persons from the moment of birth, he said, and for that reason did not do such things as cut a child's hair but would wait for their offspring

All of this changed with the arrival of explorers and early

Drugs Big Threat To High Schools

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Approximately three out of every four adults in this country say that they believe marijuana and drugs constitute serious problem in their community's high schools. This igh level of concern runs through all age groups and educational levels at slightly varying degrees.

tional levels at slightly varying degrees.

At the same time there is considerable worry over the job local high schools in the communities are doing in teaching the effects of drug use. Less than one in four terms it a good job; one in five rates it as fair, while about one in four considers it poor.

Most likely to term drug use in high schools as a serious problem. (84%) are those who have never attended one. Those who have, together with university trained people, are less likely to be as worried. However, 75% of the high school segment, and 77% of the university claim that it is. Canasegment, and 77% of the university, claim that it is. Canadians under 30, presumably closer to the generation involved, are also somewhat less concerned, with 71% calling it serious, compared to 79% of those over 50 who think it is.

Gallup interviewers put two questions to a national sample of adults, 18 years of age and over:

"Marijuana and other drugs are increasingly being used by students. Do you think it is a serious problem in high achools in this community, or not?"

Those who had an opinion were then asked:
"Do you feel that the local high schools are doing a good job of teaching the effects of drug use, or not?"

The analysis below compares Canadian attitudes as a whole, with those among the younger and oldest age group, and among those with different school backgrounds on the

Greenhouse Sanitation Makes for Healthy Plants

By JACK BEASTALL

Warm weather provides ideal conditions for a job that should be done at least once a year, namely thorough cleaning of the greenhouse.

Ideally a greenhouse should be as sanitary as a 'hospital, for it is here baby plants are born, more tender plants nursed, and surgical operations per-

Repairs to framework, glass, and ventilators can be done while the interior dries, after which a coat of paint is applied to all interior surfaces. This coat of paint, inside and outside, is an insurance premium you will never regret paying.

Logically, the heating system should be checked at the same time, replacing rusted flue-pipes, tightening leaking joints if hotwater is used, or cleaning switch boxes and thermostats of spider webs and dead insects when heating is by electricity. The coldframe, being more easily accessible to all insects and an open trap for fungous spores floating on air cur-rents, needs more thorough cleaning and spraying than

For this I use a stronger disinfectant and soap solution, taking added precautions to protect skin surfaces while spraying. However, there is no chance of drips as there is in the greenhouse.

ame Eskimo Drunkenness on Education, Says Author

By STEPHEN SCOTT

NEW YORK (CP) — See Jane. Look Dick.

See the drunken Eskimo You helped him there, Dick Good Dick. Good Jane.

James Houston, highly successful author and artist and a veteran of Arctic living, did not write that parody on the famous Dick and Jane ele-mentary reader.

But it gives an indication of the feeling of a man who. Ho-ratio Alger-like, says Canadi-ans must go north but who is concerned about what they have done and will do to the 18 000 Estimos there. 16,000 Eskimos there.

Houston, 49, would be the last to give the impression of wide-scale drunkenness among Eskimos, a people for whom he acquired a deep and abiding love during 12 years in the Arctic

But he said in a recent in-terview that the position of the Eskimo has deteriorated in the last two decades: that once-unheard-of juvenile de-linquency and drunkenness that are serious problems: that man, whether he be Russian, Canadian, Dane (in Green-land) or Alaskan, has failed in attempts to bring proper prog-ress to the Eskimo, and that southerners must learn new ways in dealing with northern

Schreyer To Hit Tax Areas

WINNIPEG (CP) - Mani-WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer says national economic and tax policies, including implications of the proposed federal withdrawal from the estate tax field, are major issues he intends to discuss at the annual meeting of the provincial premiers in Victoria next month.

Schreyer told a news con-ference Friday unless the provinces react in a uniform way. Ottawa's decision on extate taxes "will compound estate taxes "will compound the tax jungle."

Several provinces had expressed serious reservations about the revenue and equity implications of federal estate and gift tax plans, the premier said. $\frac{5}{2}$

"It would be useful if we could arrive at some consensus in Victoria to press the federal government to reconsider. Failing that, it would be desirable if we could come to a decision on uniform provincial imposition of these

The book is being sold in several English-speaking countries and is being translated into French.

It tells of three New England whalers marooned in the Arctic in the last century. They live among the Eskimos and so disrupt the lives of the Eskimos with their alien ways that they are eventually slain.

Houston said the book is a fictionalized account of a true story he learned from elderly Eskimos who remembered the three men. He confirmed that the men had disappeared in the Arctic during research in New Bedford, Mass.

The book reflects the author's concern for the effect of alien ways on the 3,000-year-old Eskimo way of life which, he said, southern man may eradicate.

Houston spent nine years on Baffin Island, most of the time as civil administrator for the 65,000-square-mile western section. The area had 343 Es-kimos in 13 widely-separated "camps." It now has about 600 Eskimos, many centralized at Cepe Dorset.

Houston said that in the last two decades the position of the Eskimo has deteriorated, and he's not sure of what the answer to the situation is.

"I'm not a critic of the Ca nadian government. I was, one of their boys in the most formative time. I worked hard in that garden along with a lot-of other good people.

Gastown—Drug Haven?

VANCOUVER (CP) the front door of a beer parlor in Vancouver's water-front Gastown area, a bouner was arguing with a iddle-aged couple and their 21-year-old married daughter.

The daughter looked as if she_could be under 19, the legal drinking age in British' Columbia," and the bouncer insisted on proof of her age.

OUT OF CONTROL

The original townsite of Vancouver, now being redeveloped, Gastown, is merely the latest focal point of a growing public awareness of the drug problem, said to be out of control in B.C.

The furore comes hard on the heels of a startling report from the B.C. Medical Asso-ciation which said there are at least 10,000 heroin addicts in B.C., possibly 15,000.

Previous estimates, which admitted that Vancouver was the heroin capital of Canada, figured the province had 3,500

The medical association says. Premier W. A. C. Bennett's government isn't doing enough. Health Minister Ralph Loffmark counters that the province is doing as much as it can and that the federal government has been steadily withdrawing n e e d e d funds from rehabilitation programs.

Mr. Loffmark adds that the doctors themselves haven't been doing much of a job on the jeroin problem and that the heroin problem and that fashionable practitioners at the Vancouver General Hos-pital don't like to be involved with addicts. The doctors deny it.

Mayor Campbell says wishy-

up the problem before the police became concerned."

INHERITED PROBLEM

Gastown inherited the drug problem. The 10-square-block area, centre of town when Vancouver was incorporated in 1886, became in turn headquarters for transient loggers, the fresh produce trade, wholesale clothing and warehouses.

It's on the edge of skid road, a much larger area.

HAVE 'PRIORITIES'

"We have tips coming to us that we have to shelve until some other time because we have to have our priorities."

The main priority is getting the traffickers.

"It's such a lucrative business that these guys will risk anything to get at it," said the police officer. "The profits are high enough to risk death."

An 11-Round supply of heroin seized by police last week would have a value of $1 million on the illicit retail market. At going rates, it probably cost the pushers $100,000.

In this century psychology has made a forceful, penetrat-ing impact on religion. Religion has been investigated by psychologists. Psychological principles and methods are extensively used by the clergy and other religious workers And it seems that the most influential psychological stance here is the psycho-analytic, the "depth" psychology deriving primarily from the work of Sigmund Freud. Wide approval is given to Freud's description of religion as "the universal obsessional neurosis of humanity"— which is assumed to be a classy way of saying that if you are religious you are sick-sick-

Freud's mrost important study of religion is his 1928 book, The Future of an Illusion. Here Freud declared religion to be a harmful illusion and he tried to demonstrate that religious belief is determined by irrational, unconscious forces.

But, unlike many who have ollowed him, Freud was too self-critical and too scrupu lous to put more weight on his psychological principles than they could logically carry. There was more tenta-

Some who have been incluenced by Freud say to Christian and Jewish be-lievers, "You believe simply because you wish to believe Your belief is merely a self-inflicted illusion, merely an exercise in wishful-thinking." But surely the religious be-liever can here apply Freud's technique to disbelief and say to the critic, "Your belief about my belief, and your rejection of religion, is mere-ly the fulfilment of your wishes, your own self-inflicted

But surely an equally impressive case can be put forth that disbelief in God can be traced to that pet of the Freudians, the Oedipus complex, to a jealous desire to overthrow and sup-plant the father. This game of psychological ploy and counter-ploy leads to a stale-mate—and the issue must be settled on other grounds. It is significant that Freud, in his book Civilization and Its Discontents, published a year after The Future of an Illusion, said that in the earlier book he was concerned "much-less with the deepest sources of religious feeling than with what the ordinary man understands about his religion." And with his cue. religion." And, with his cus tomary honesty, he urged his followers to pay respectful attention to these deepest sources of religious feeling which he himself had not attempted to proble. People Used to Mercury

By DOUG PEDEN (Times Sports Editor) KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii

Mercury is a constant conversational topic around the lath annual Hawaiian International Billfish Tournament in ocean waters off Kailua Bay. So much so that interest of competing anglers is tocused almost as much on the activities of marine biologists in attendance as in the tourney's game fishing privabry.

lot of people and the islanders are eating far fewer fish-cakes, the usual destination of tever of the big fish, and paying much less, thus causing a problem for Kona tishermen since about 3,500 marlin are caught each year off the Hawaii coast.

There will be po fishcakes

There will be no fishcakes made from billfish caught in this year's tournament, which is being contested by 270 anglers on 77 teams. All were turned over to the National Marine Fisheries Service for an intensive study and skip intiously confident the biolosts will find the mercury within safe limits.

It was all very funny, as I told the ambulance attendant on the way to Royal Jubilee emergency. The only problem was that it was a little hard to laugh: It hurt too much.

The whole thing seemed especially humorous as I tallfed up the loss of a pair of pants and shirt, torn when I fell, plus the doctor fees.

Very funny, indeed.

Sunny and warmer is the outlook, not only for the rest of the weekend but Monday too.

The weather office at Victoria International Airport suggests temperatures will climb to about 75 Sunday and winds on the Straits of Georgia and Juan de Fuca will fade to light airs, under 15 from the northwest or west.

The high pressure system bringing the good weather is creeping west from a centre about 120 miles southwest of Vancouver Island. Fog and some cloud off the island's west coast may persist Sunday morning.
